Henry Poor Lumber and Flooring Express have been busy taking part in the Builder Association of Greater Lafayette's Home Building and Remodeling Show and sponsoring and participating in the February General Membership meeting.

A number of HP/FE employees joined the large crowd at the BAGL Membership meeting on February 10th held at the Outpost. Everyone enjoyed a great meal and a chance to hear Coldwell Banker's Charlie and Steve Shook discuss local housing market trends. Jay Andrew also presented the 2014 Associate Member of the Year Award to Andy Switzer of ARKOR Architects and Engineers. Jay Andrew remarked, "Having our team members participate in these meetings allows us to connect with our key customers and show that we support their different activities."

This year's event was held on February 28 and March 1 at the Tippecanoe County Fairgrounds. Even a late winter snowfall didn't seem to deter people from visiting the over 75 companies taking part. Bob Bills from Flooring Express commented, "Everyone is always interested in seeing the latest trends and new products. We try to show everyone all the possibilities we offer."

Local Deck Builder Garner's National Acclaim

A project submitted by Charles Chad of Decks Unlimited was recently recognized by TREX Composite Decking as the 2014 Commercial Project of the Year. This was one of eight awards handed out by TREX nationally. Charles was notified in February that his design had been selected.

The winning project was a 4000 sq. ft. deck built around a second story pool on an apartment building. Charles worked closely with Henry Poor's Eric Miller who used the architect's blue print to design the deck that would fit the available space around the pool.

Eric commented, "Working with Charles and coming up with a design that worked was fun. The end result was a deck that was really functional and attractive."

TREX presented a plaque to Decks Unlimited and plans to feature this project on their website and Facebook page.

With the new deck building season just about ready to start, we'd encourage anyone considering a new deck to get in touch with Eric Miller at Henry Poor.

In his current role he is responsible for dispatching deliveries and keeping the yard and building materials clean and organized. Rob commented, "Although it can get hectic at times, I enjoy working with everyone and doing what we can to support our customers."
